WHAT IS ASHRAE 62.2?

ASHRAE Standard 62.2-2007, Ventilation and Acceptable Indoor Air Quality in Low-Rise Residential Buildings, is the national ventilation standard of design for all homes and up to three-story multifamily buildings. 62.2 allows exhaust, supply, or balanced ventilation, meaning that a simple exhaust or supply fan can be used, or these flows can be balanced with both a supply fan and an exhaust fan, with or without heat recovery. It is up to the designer or builder to decide if filtration, tempering, or dehumidification is required, based on where the house or building is built.

The ASHRAE 62.2 fan sizing is based on total square footage of the home and number of bedrooms. The formula is; (total square footage of the home/100) + ((number of bedrooms+1) X 7.5 cfm). For example; a 2500 square foot house with 3 bedrooms needs ((3+1) x 7.5) + (2500/100) = 30 + 25 = 55 cfm. ASHRAE 62.2 makes the sizing easy by providing the following table:

Floor Area	BEDROOMS
	0-1	2-3	4-5	6-7	>7
< 1500	30	45	60	75	90
1501 - 3000	45	60	75	90	105
3001 - 4500	60	75	90	105	120
4501 - 6000	75	90	105	120	135
6001 - 7500	90	105	120	135	150
>7500	105	120	135	150	165
